

- ff. 1-71 (a) [Tract in support of the Country Party against the Court Party]:
Gentlemen, You have now, for seven years & more, been in a state of minority, under the regency of a Foreign Prince and Family ... Remember therefore Gentlemen, the difference at present is reduced to a narrow compass. The Court are for Absolute Power and enslaving the Nation. The Country Party are for The Liberties of England. Finis.
- ff. 73-136 (b) [Tract arguing the merits of the Church Party over those of the Whigs]: I am firmly persuaded that there is not in their way a better sett of men, generally speaking, than ye Freeholders of England ... An entire & thorough constitution in Church & Revolution. Vtrum horum Mavis Accipe. Chuse which you please. Finis.
- ff. 137-40^v (c) [Transcript of the beginning of (b)]: I am firmly perswaded, that there is not in their way a better sett of men, gen'ally speaking, than the Freeholders of England ... Even a Wife fond of a Court, and of sitting at the Receipt of Custom, cannot justify the Infamy of such a Preceeding.
